1. KAURNA STATEMENT OF CULTURAL SIGNIFICANCE

Together with Pinky Flat and River Torrens / Karrawirra Parri, the site of Adelaide Oval ~~was~~ is part of the Red Kangaroo Dreaming and ~~was~~ an extended campsite used by the Kurna for ceremonies, games, religious observances and burials. Consequently, Adelaide Oval and surrounds are of spiritual and cultural significance for Kurna.

After the arrival of Europeans and before Adelaide Oval was established, the Kurna and other ~~Indigenous Aboriginal~~ groups continued their traditions of public performance for visitors to the 'country'. Kurna were displaced from the area along the River Torrens as the City and Park Lands were established and progressively developed by settlers.

Following the establishment of Adelaide Oval as a sporting venue, Kurna people staged two corroborees at the Oval.

Some Aboriginal participation in sport at the Oval occurred during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries; however, this was limited due to the attitudes of settlers and the ~~racist practices in place at the time.~~ ~~availability of opportunities.~~ Aboriginal involvement was most notable in Australian rules football and there have been many revered Aboriginal players.

The Oval is a forum in which ~~Indigenous Aboriginal~~ and non-~~Indigenous Aboriginal~~ people have been able to interact through sport and other events, contributing in part to the improvement of cultural relations between non-~~Indigenous Aboriginal~~ and ~~Indigenous Aboriginal~~ people. The Oval reflects the local history of ~~Indigenous Aboriginal~~ participation in sport.

For ~~Indigenous Aboriginal~~ people, Adelaide Oval provides a place where racial stereotyping can be ~~overcome~~ challenged through the ethos of sport, presenting an opportunity for participation and contest, irrespective of race.

~~While the Kurna are recognised as the traditional owners of the land occupied by the Adelaide Oval precinct, the Australian Federal Court determined on 21 March 2018 that Native Title has been extinguished. The rights of the Kurna through the Aboriginal Heritage Act 1988 remain in place.~~

While Native Title over the Adelaide Oval Precinct has been extinguished, the Australian Federal Court determined on 21 March 2018 that the Kurna people are the Traditional Owners of the Adelaide Plains region (including the Adelaide Oval Precinct). Further, the rights of the Kurna through the Aboriginal Heritage Act 1988 remain in place" and

- Clarification at 27.1 – no more than 8 single day events
