Homelessness Strategy foreword

There's a perception that housing isn't a local government issue.

But when it comes to tackling homelessness, councils have a social responsibility to look after residents, especially when it's never been tougher to find a place to live.

As a capital city, the City of Adelaide has one of the highest proportions of homelessness in South Australia, with about 400 people sleeping rough, couch surfing or between accommodation on Census night in 2021.

The City of Adelaide's new Homelessness Strategy focuses on prevention and early intervention to achieve zero functional homelessness in our city.

This new strategy couldn't come at a more important time, with our city on the cusp of a once-in-a-generation population boom. If we want the number of people living in the city to double, we don't want the rate of homelessness to grow proportionately.

This strategy adopts an integrated and collaborative approach, emphasising the importance of working alongside state and federal governments, and neighbouring councils, to find ways to house those who fall through the cracks.

We also know those experiencing homelessness aren't just wanting a roof over their head. They need essential wrap-around services to help them build a healthy and connected life.

Our community strives to become a city that's focused on equity, civility, and leaving nobody behind. With its housing-first focus, the City of Adelaide's Homelessness Strategy makes this possible for the future of our city.

Jane Lomax-Smith
LORD MAYOR, CITY OF ADELAIDE

Introduction

The City of Adelaide is committed to solving homelessness through a community development approach. A focus on prevention and early intervention will link people to support services while improving social connections and increasing community capacity.

We want homelessness to be a rare and short-term experience. By working with the State and Federal Governments we can address the drivers of homelessness and ensure there is safe and affordable housing for people to create a home.

A safe and affordable home is a human right. For too long public policy at State and Commonwealth levels has worked to reinforce the idea that housing is a commodity rather than a human right and the critical social infrastructure on which communities and lives are built.

Housing is the basis of stability and security for an individual or family. The centre of our social, emotional, and sometimes economic lives, a home should be a sanctuary—a place to live in peace, security and dignity – United Nations

Australia is in the grips of a long-term and worsening housing crisis. Housing costs continue to rise, people are locked out of ownership and rental markets. Risks and experiences of homelessness are increasing across all communities.

City of Adelaide is growing its population as a capital city. It is important that experiences of homelessness do not grow proportionately. As with most capital cities, the City of Adelaide has higher rates of homelessness compared with suburban and regional areas, including rates of what can be described as 'temporary homelessness', a reality of the centralisation of services in the CBD and the city's role as a gathering place for those who visit from other areas for appointments, cultural events or to see family and friends.

Evictions, displacements, discrimination, inequality and poverty are key drivers of homelessness. Stigma regarding the experiences of homelessness remains. Community sentiment often positions people experiencing homelessness as 'other' when homelessness is a widespread experience that can happen to anyone.

Homelessness and poor health outcomes are strongly associated, as homelessness can lead to and exacerbate poor health outcomes. Conversely, some health conditions, such as mental illness may lead to homelessness. People experiencing homelessness are more likely to experience poor health and premature mortality than the general population.

Action is needed to end homelessness. The Australian Alliance to End Homelessness has a slogan 'Homelessness is Solvable'. The City of Adelaide is committed to doing what we can to achieve this aim. This draft Homelessness Strategy – Everyone's Business, is Council's commitment to working to end homelessness and outlines the role Council will play and how Council will use its resources to do so.

Our Goals

1. Housing – People have a place to call home.
2. Closing the gap – Aboriginal and Torres Strait people have equitable outcomes.
3. Safety and support – People are safe.
4. Wellbeing and connection – People are well and living connected lives.

A safe and affordable home is a human right. For too long public policy at State and Commonwealth levels has worked to reinforce the idea that housing is a commodity rather than a human right and the critical social infrastructure on which communities and lives are built.

Drivers of Homelessness

Homelessness is a systemic issue which requires a multidisciplinary public policy response. Homelessness cannot be solved without improvements to social services, primary and secondary health services and addressing Australia's housing crisis. Causes of homelessness vary greatly.

In Australia the top causes of homelessness are poverty, unemployment, shortage of affordable housing, family breakdown, domestic violence, mental illness, sexual assault, addiction, financial difficulty, gambling and social isolation .

Young people are more likely to become homeless because they often experience difficulties securing long-term accommodation and are particularly affected by poverty and the shortage of affordable housing in Australia.

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people are overrepresented among those experiencing homelessness and underrepresented as homeowners and face intersectional challenges in accessing suitable housing. Housing solutions in the regions, addressing lower levels of inter-generational wealth transfer, health inequalities and economic participation limit access to housing.

Research also shows that homelessness is experienced differently by different demographics.

Nationally, the ongoing reduction of social housing and increasing housing unaffordability has contributed to increased housing stress making already vulnerable Australians more vulnerable to experiencing homelessness. Solutions to homelessness cannot be considered without increases in transitional housing, social housing and improvements in housing affordability. In addition, retaining people in housing also needs to be supported by wrap around services.

In the City of Adelaide there are several crisis and transitional forms of accommodation which are either at capacity due to demand or due to lack of housing available to transition vulnerable people once they are ready for more permanent accommodation (e.g. Common Ground and St John's Youth Services Inc). This transitional accommodation must be established with appropriate wrap around services. It is crucial that regardless of the population transitional or crises housing serves, that there is enough appropriate and affordable housing to transition into.

Defining Homelessness

There are numerous definitions for homelessness used in Australia. For the purposes of this draft Strategy someone is experiencing homelessness if they:

- Are in an improvised dwelling, tent or sleeping rough; or
- Have no security of tenure e.g., are staying in temporary lodgings, supported accommodation or couch surfing; or
- Do not have control of, and space for social relations for example, severely crowded dwellings; and
- Do not have access to suitable alternatives.

Research conducted for Greater Adelaide , illustrates the different ways particular groups of people experience homelessness:

- Rough sleeping is more often experienced by men.
- Women are more likely to access homelessness services.
- Young people are more likely to couch surf or be in temporary accommodation rather than sleeping rough.

The lack of an agreed definition of homelessness creates challenges for measuring levels of homelessness, as multiple definitions have contributed to multiple methods and data sets being used to understand levels of homelessness in Australia. The true extent of homelessness is difficult to gauge and likely to be higher than the available data would suggest.

Measuring Homelessness

There are numerous ways to measure homelessness, with no data set being complete due to the often-hidden nature of some forms of homelessness.

Key data sets include:

- Census data – which relies on ABS staff to locate people experiencing homelessness to ensure their inclusion in the data.
- South Australian Housing Authority's Homeless to Home (H2H) data held by the Australian Institute of Health and Welfare (AIHW) – which relies on collecting data on people accessing specialist homelessness services, and agencies providing generalist and/or specialist support for people experiencing or at risk of homelessness many of whom are operating as part of South Australia's Homelessness Alliances.
- Adelaide Zero Project – which uses a 'By-Name' list to understand who is experiencing homelessness in the City of Adelaide and provides granular data on the specific needs of people experiencing homelessness in terms of housing and support.

While the ABS Census provides a national data set, it is point in time, collected only every five years and resource intensive to collect more regularly. Census data is widely acknowledged to underrepresent some groups among the homeless population. Other data sets such as those collected by the South Australian Housing Authority and Australian Institute of Health and Welfare, rely on reporting about people accessing services . While a useful indicator, this data does not account for seasonal and other fluctuations in homelessness, nor reflect the cyclical and chronic nature of homelessness. More granular data about homelessness is needed.

Data exists for the City of Adelaide, captured in near to real time, through the Adelaide Zero Project, the Collective Impact initiative to end rough sleeping homelessness in inner Adelaide, of which the City of Adelaide is a founding partner.

The Adelaide Zero Project's comprehensive data dashboard provides data about who is actively homeless in the City of Adelaide (people known to services to be rough sleeping), people who have been housed who were previously rough sleeping and people no longer known to the system (inactive) (see Our Progress – South Australian Alliance to End Homelessness).

Homelessness in the City of Adelaide

ABS data for the City of Adelaide reports 398 people experiencing homelessness on Census night in 2021. In September 2023, the Adelaide Zero Project reported 212 'actively homeless' people, which was a decrease from 222 in August 2023. There was also a reduction in newly identified people sleeping rough for the first time in the inner city. Census data reports increased numbers of people experiencing homelessness across Australia, from 116,427 in 2016, to 122,494 in 2021. This data represents an increase of 5.2% over the five-year period.

South Australia experienced similar trends in levels of homelessness, with a 48.6% increase over the same timeframe (an increase from 936 people in 2016 to 1,391 people in 2021. This is a trend consistent with most other Australian States .

Australia wide Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people are overrepresented in homelessness statistics. More than a third of people who are actively homeless in the inner city according to Adelaide Zero Project data identify as Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander people. 2021 Census data recorded 11.3% of homeless people identified as Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander. Both of these data points are a significant overrepresentation considering that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people comprise 1.7% of the total population of Greater Adelaide at Census 2021 .

Ending homelessness: roles and responsibilities

The housing and homelessness sector in Australia is complex. A coordinated effort by all levels of government and non-government sectors is needed to end homelessness.

Government

Australia is facing a housing crisis. The crisis is challenging what has been a relatively consistent housing and public policy landscape for all levels of government for more than two decades. The supply of housing is now a consideration of particular political interest, with a clear mismatch between demand and supply, especially in terms of diversity of the types of housing and accommodation offerings people need.

Federal Government is responsible for tax settings, financial rules, and income support policy. It provides funding and support for housing, including for social housing and rental assistance. The National Housing and Homelessness Agreement is the major funding agreement between the Commonwealth and the State. A renegotiated Agreement is expected to be operational in 2024.

State Government is responsible for social housing and homelessness services. In large measures, State Government sets policy and process for housing, with responsibilities around land use planning, building codes and major housing projects, all critical factors in enabling housing supply. The State Government plays a leading role in wrap-around services provision for vulnerable community groups and people at risk of experiencing homelessness.

Local Government has a role in local planning policy, development assessment and community development. It can seek to change land use policy at the local level. Councils support affordable housing through rate setting and rebates to not-for-profit housing providers.

Local government also has a role in the provision and management of the public realm and elements of social infrastructure to support communities. Areas with quality public realm, high amenity and access to social infrastructure are more appealing for residents and attract development of new housing.

Councils support the homelessness sector through leadership, partnerships, facilitation and advocacy for services.

Private and Community Sectors

Not-for-profit agencies, including Community Housing Providers and private industry play a role in housing and homelessness through delivery of housing and support services.

Community Housing Providers build and manage affordable rental properties, often for under-represented groups such as people with disability, older people, etc.

Provision of affordable housing by the private sector is not mandatory. Incentives and inclusionary zoning policies assist with delivery of limited affordable housing by the private sector. Provision could be improved with greater clarity and certainty of requirements.

People experiencing homelessness should have their rights upheld. All people should have access to support services, social infrastructure, and opportunities for social connection.

Our Policy

Every person has the right to an adequate standard of living, and access to safe and affordable housing is one of the most basic human rights.

Intersectional factors lead people to experiences of homelessness including poverty, family and domestic violence, inequality, racism, trauma, discrimination, and a shortage of appropriate affordable housing. Climate change is having real impacts on the security of housing with extreme weather events leading to emergency responses and displacement.

The City of Adelaide supports a 'housing first' approach to homelessness which means that we believe a home is the foundation for building a healthy and connected life. However, homelessness is not just about housing, it is also about the supports that wrap around someone who is experiencing marginalisation and vulnerability which enable them to maintain their home.

People experiencing homelessness should have their rights upheld. All people should have access to support services, social infrastructure, and opportunities for social connection.

We will continue to pursue a housing first agenda alongside the State and Federal Governments, through our Housing Strategy, and a partnership approach to specialist homelessness services through our commitment to the Adelaide Zero Project and Towards Home Alliance.

We will also work to prevent homelessness through a community development approach that focuses on prevention and early intervention by linking people to support services while improving social connections and increasing community capacity at a local level.

Advocate for a Priority Care Centre in the city to support accessible and affordable healthcare options, and sobering up facilities that divert people from emergency departments

Goal 1 – Housing – People have a place to call home.

The Situation

Local government does not have a mandate to provide homelessness services, support or housing but there is a community expectation and moral imperative that Council actively responds.

To support a housing first approach to homelessness, housing supply must be addressed alongside a coordinated approach to homelessness prevention and early intervention.

Solutions to homelessness cannot be considered without increases in transitional housing, social housing and improvements in housing affordability. Helping vulnerable people who have experienced, or are at risk of experiencing homelessness, maintain a home requires wrap around services.

Housing tenure in the City of Adelaide like other capital cities, is markedly different from Greater Adelaide or Australia as a whole, with 49.9 percent of residents in City of Adelaide renting in the private market, compared with a Greater Adelaide average of 22.1 percent.

Nationally we are facing a housing affordability crisis, including within the City of Adelaide. Recent pressures on the economy and a limited focus on housing by all levels of government have combined to create an unaffordable housing market, with limited supply and very low vacancy rates.

Currently 33 percent of low to moderate income households are experiencing rental stress in the city, a figure which has been increasing in the last 10 years. This means that 33 percent of households who are typically key workers, spend more than 30 percent of their income on housing costs. In 2021 this was equivalent to over 2000 households living in rental stress. Low vacancy rates of one percent, mean that there are very few rentals available for people to move into. Not only does this contribute to increasing rent prices but it also means homes simply are not available for people who want to live in the city.

The SA Homelessness Alliances are now well established. City of Adelaide will continue to work collaboratively with the Homelessness Alliances, supporting the success of this best-practice, evidence-based approach to coordinated service delivery.

Our Ambitions

City of Adelaide has a long history of public policy focused on homelessness, and social and affordable housing in the city. The scope and breadth of our housing legacy, and our approach, are outlined in our draft Housing Strategy including commitments to housing choice and diversity, adaptive reuse for housing and creating conditions for new housing models such as built to rent to thrive in the city.

City of Adelaide has identified a need for interventions in the housing market to foster and grow a new affordable rental asset class for city workers and residents. A shift in Federal and State policy settings to reduce focus on small scale private investment in housing and elevate social housing and affordable rental housing through institutional investment is crucial.

As at the end of September 2023, to achieve Functional Zero Homelessness by 2025 in the City of Adelaide, there would need to be a two percent reduction in inflow of people experiencing homelessness and 29 housing outcomes per month. City of Adelaide supports the State Government's goal of additional housing in the city as well as the regions, and redevelopment of public housing assets.

City of Adelaide supports strategies for maintaining tenancies and keeping people safe during extreme weather events in line with climate justice principles.

Targets

1. Housing Outcomes – 29 State Government housing outcomes per month are provided in the City of Adelaide for people experiencing homelessness to 2026.
2. Adaptive Reuse – Deliver 50 dwellings annually, through adaptive reuse of underutilised buildings.

1000 Housing Outcomes

City of Adelaide is a founding partner of the Adelaide Zero Project which in 2023 reached 1000 housing outcomes for people experiencing rough sleeping. The 1000 housing outcomes is the legacy of five years' collaboration and effort across government, Council, the homelessness sector and community.

"We know every capital city in Australia has a unique experience of homelessness. 60 per cent of people experiencing rough sleeping in South Australia are in the Adelaide CBD. We applaud the Adelaide Zero Project for reaching this milestone and remain committed to working collaboratively with all partners to reduce the issues that result in homelessness so that everyone in our communities can live with safety and certainty."

Lord Mayor, Dr Jane Lomax-Smith

Leading Practice: Case Study

Housing First

Finland adopted a 'housing first' approach to homelessness, the fundamental premise of which is that everyone is entitled to somewhere to live, even people with complex psychosocial, health and financial issues such as addiction or poor credit ratings. The theory is that it is more effective to tackle the multiple issues often faced by a person experiencing homelessness if that person has a stable home. This approach has seen homelessness decrease from approximately 3,500 to 1,000 between 2008 and 2020, which equates to an almost 30 percent reduction in people experiencing homelessness. This is a figure significantly higher compared to other European countries .

The City of Helsinki's approach to homelessness seeks to prevent homelessness through local outreach and the development of preventive services which were provided at a person's home, at the same time as reducing homelessness through a housing first approach. Helsinki's approach highlights prevention as the key component in the reduction of homelessness and the need for affordable and available housing using housing stock owned by the city.

Every person has the right to an adequate standard of living, and access to safe and affordable housing is one of the most basic human rights.

Goal 2 – Closing the gap – Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people have equitable outcomes.

The Situation

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people are more likely to experience homelessness and are underrepresented as homeowners.

The effects of colonisation, racism, discrimination and intergenerational trauma contribute to an over-representation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people across a range of systems including health, child protection and correctional services.

More than a third of people who are actively homeless in the inner city according to Adelaide Zero Project data identify as Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander. Census data for 2021 recorded 11.3 percent of homelessness people identifying as Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander. Both of these data points are a significant overrepresentation considered against the fact that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people comprise 1.7 percent of the total population of Greater Adelaide at Census 2021 .

Our Ambitions

The City of Adelaide should be a welcoming and culturally safe place for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people. Our approach should be co-designed, co-led and co-delivered with Aboriginal and Torres Strait people, including through identified positions within Council. Our efforts to address homelessness must be aligned with the principles of our Reconciliation Action Plan.

Governments of all levels should engage with Aboriginal and Torres Strait people to understand the needs, barriers and opportunities for housing. All levels of government have a role to play in supporting Aboriginal and Torres Strait leaders to lead conversations about transitional accommodation solutions and identify long-term strategies to address housing outcomes. Housing options are needed on Country and in the regions, Greater Adelaide and the city.

Targets

- 3. Housing for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander People – Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people actively experiencing homeless in the City of Adelaide is less than a third of homeless people.
- 4. Employment for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander People – City of Adelaide achieves an Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander employment target of 2 percent of all City of Adelaide employees by 2024.

Puti on Kurna Yerta – Bush in the City

In the wake of the COVID pandemic several regional and remote visitors were prevented from returning home due to natural weather events on the land and public imperatives. Puti Kurna Yerta (Bush in the City) was set up in the southern Adelaide Park Lands as culturally-led, temporary accommodation and multi-agency service hub.

The City of Adelaide supported the establishment of Puti Kurna Yerta to keep vulnerable visitors to Adelaide safe and facilitate a return to country for those wishing to return home.

The Bush in the City was supported by the Safety and Wellbeing Taskforce lead by the Department for Human Services with engagement of key Aboriginal and Torres Strait communities represented by Kurna Yerta Aboriginal Corporation and Anangu Pitjantjatjara Yankunytjatjara (APY) Executive Board.

As a culturally inclusive, safe space, the Hub saw relevant agencies working in collaboration with staff and interpreters from Iwiri Aboriginal Corporation, the Kurna Nation Aboriginal Corporation, and other appropriate Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander organisations.

Goal 3 – Safety and Support – People are safe.

The Situation

Building and maintaining community safety requires a whole of community approach with residents, visitors, businesses and all levels of government working together to support a safe and inclusive environment for all. People without a home are more reliant on public spaces to meet their needs, including access to food, period products, places of refuge, public toilets, drinking water and phone charging points. People deserve to feel safe in their community. Women, children, young people, LGBTIQ+ people, people with disability, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and people of culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds are more likely to experience violence and sexual assault.

Climate change is worsening homelessness both in terms of being a driver and how homelessness is experienced by individuals through health and wellbeing effects, and the ability to access support. Extreme weather events have real impacts, and our response must be broader than existing code red and blue procedures to ensure the burden and impact of climate change are not disproportionately experienced by marginalised people.

The experience of homelessness must not be conflated with other public space uses such as public congregation, asking for money, drinking and drug use.

The workforce providing support and services to people experiencing or at risk of homelessness also need to be safe and well supported. The homelessness sector has been characterised by low remuneration, job insecurity and large workloads. The stability and security of the homelessness sector is vital to achieving public policy goals.

An agreed definition of homelessness would assist in accurate and timely data collection. Having accurate data will correctly represent the problem and assists to direct coordinated, timely responses and prevention initiatives.

Our Ambitions

The City of Adelaide wants to create a well-designed city that meets the diverse needs of a growing number of residents and city users in ways that create strong and welcoming neighbourhoods and places.

We will create public spaces and streets that are active, safe and high amenity, providing direct pedestrian and cycling links to shops, public transport and open spaces.

We will provide places of refuge including community centres, libraries and areas to shelter. Our management of public spaces will consider the impact on people experiencing homelessness and promote dignity and respect.

We acknowledge the impacts of climate change on people experiencing homelessness and ensure our responses reflect climate justice principles related to representation, inclusion, and protection.

Targets

5. City Amenities – City of Adelaide managed public amenities including public toilets, drinking water, charging points and places of shelter are available to the public 24 hours a day, seven days a week and located across a range of key city locations.

Bold Moves

Principles

- Work in coordination with direct service providers, police and health services to provide rough sleeper support.
- Rough sleepers are referred on to services before being moved on from locations.
- Take a proactive approach to prevention and early intervention in homelessness.
- Flexible support, choice, self-determination, and active engagement without coercion.
- Harm reduction approach where regulatory responses are underpinned by harm minimisation and diversion strategies.
- On-street giving initiatives by the community and businesses is redirected to ensure engagement of people experiencing homelessness with support services.

Lord Mayor Homelessness Roundtable A Lord Mayor’s Homelessness Roundtable was held in 2023 to bring together experts from across the sector to identify service gaps, practical opportunities to partner, amplify early intervention, discuss opportunities and challenges with data collection and ways in which the City of Adelaide can support and advocate to State and Commonwealth Government for relevant transitional accommodation and services that directly address a reduction of homelessness. The sector will come back together in twelve months to assess commitments and progress. “Council have an important role in bringing people together to see if we can work together in a more committed, focused way.”

Goal 4 – Wellbeing and connection – People are well and living connected lives.

The Situation

Local government has a unique opportunity to ensure local communities understand the drivers of homelessness and are empowered to work alongside government and non-government service providers to prevent homelessness.

City of Adelaide can work alongside specialist homelessness services to ensure support is easy to access, flexible, immediate, and available for as long as needed.

An integrated response to housing, homelessness and mental health with appropriate wrap around services provides an opportunity for people to stabilise their mental health and exit the cycle of disadvantage created by inconsistent access to appropriate supports.

Evidence shows that providing long term housing coupled with the appropriate supports can be successful in delivering sustained tenancies for people with complex needs. For those experiencing homelessness with complex needs, once housing is secured, a multidisciplinary team of support workers can address individual needs through services such as drug and alcohol counselling or mental health treatment.

The 2021 Census reported 25 percent of people experiencing homelessness were aged 12-24 years. Young people are particularly vulnerable to the impacts of homelessness on educational and employment outcomes and connectedness to community life. A focus on prevention of youth homelessness by keeping young people connected with their families, communities and providing education/training or employment opportunities is needed.

Our Ambitions

A community development approach will underpin our work to support local communities. Community development principles include empowerment, human rights, social justice, self-determination, and collective action. Our approach will be person-focused and recognise the value of lived experience.

City of Adelaide will support action to address the drivers of homelessness including poverty, family and domestic violence, inequality, racism, trauma, discrimination, and a shortage of appropriate affordable housing. We will work to address the social determinants of health through a partnership approach with State and Federal Government.

Our work will acknowledge that those most at risk of homelessness are Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, women experiencing domestic and family violence, young people, people with physical and mental health conditions, people who have experienced trauma and brain injury.

Our libraries and community centres provide Council's frontline community services including information about homelessness services, community responses and peer support. We will enhance our service offer through these critical community services to ensure the community has access to information and redirection to essential State Government social support services.

City of Adelaide can work alongside specialist homelessness services to ensure support is easy to access, flexible, immediate, and available for as long as needed.

What City of Adelaide has Already Done

Partner

Benches of Hope

City of Adelaide worked with Adelaide street artist Leah Grant to led and mentor members of the community, including women impacted by violence, students, and supporters to paint 5 street-side benches across the city as a message of hope, resilience and healing.

The action was taken on 25 November 2022 as part of the International Day of Elimination of Violence Against Women and the 16 days of activism that followed culminating on Human Rights Day.

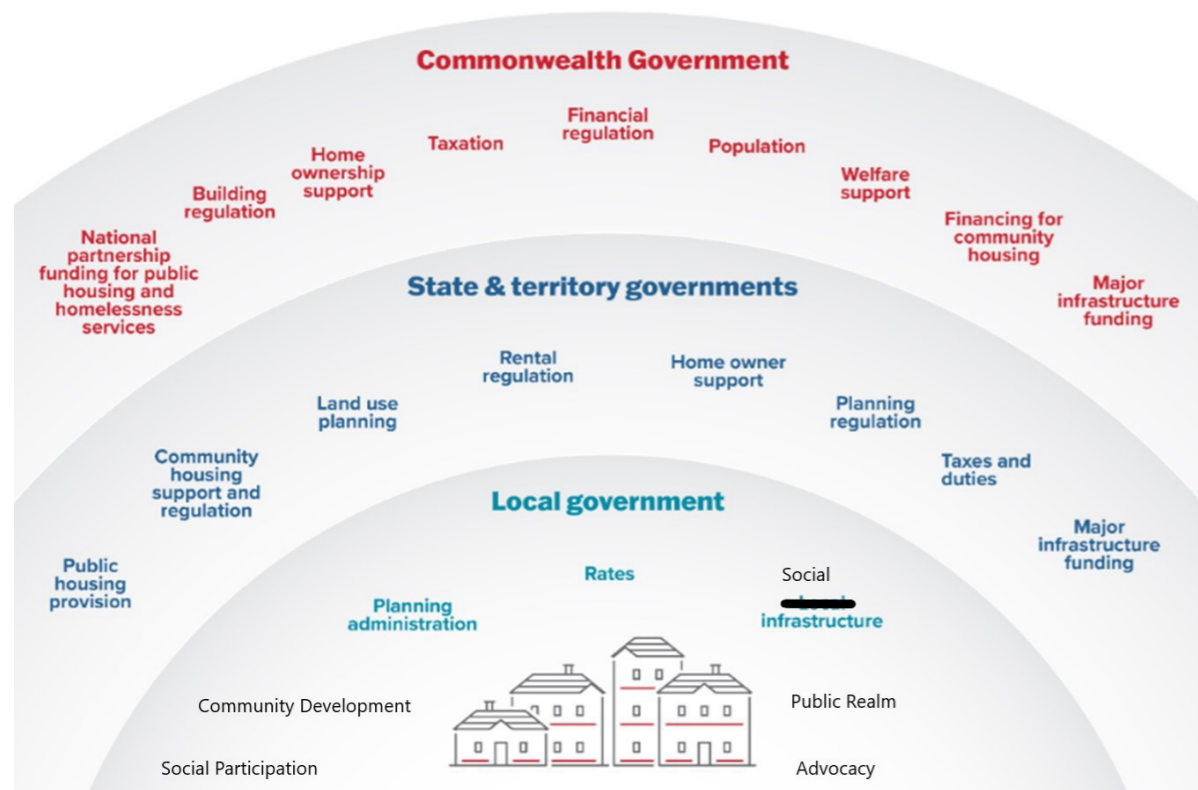

Public Art has the power to connect people, to share messages and encourage conversation and action. Benches of Hope raises awareness about gender-based violence and creates spaces of public safety through art. Each bench features butterflies as the foundational symbol of the campaign. City of Adelaide is proud to support the campaign which runs globally every year and calls for an end to violence against women and girls.

"Painting the bench to bring awareness to International Day of Elimination of Violence Against Women brought so much fun, joy and happiness whilst painting these Benches of Hope that I almost forgot the reason we were painting them."

How the Strategy was Developed

Homelessness Roundtable 10 August 2023

55 attendees.

Homelessness Policy Discussion Paper

We looked at existing housing and homelessness policy in Australia.

Policy Review

Our existing policy and plans informed this Strategy. We learnt from what works and included it in this Strategy. The Strategy is clear about the outcomes we want and the roles we will play.

Literature Review

The Strategy draws on the work of Leanne Mitchell's in her Churchill Fellowship report, 'Everybody's Business: What local government can do to end homelessness'.

Strategic Alignment

Federal Government

Closing the Gap

Seeks to improve housing and homelessness outcomes for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people. This includes shared decision making through a Housing Policy Partnership.

National Housing and Homelessness Plan

The National Government is developing a National Housing and Homelessness Plan. The Plan will set a shared vision for policy. It seeks a more coordinated response by all levels of government.

State Government

Future Directions for Homelessness

The State Government outlines a commitment to working with the specialist homelessness sector to design a new system that will better meet the needs of South Australians at risk of or experiencing homelessness. State Government commitments under the Future Directions for Homelessness Strategy include:

- Preventing people from falling into homelessness
- Ensuring people get the right support, when they need it
- Rapidly rehousing people into safe, stable and long-term housing so they don't cycle in and out of homelessness.

Local Government

City of Adelaide's Draft Strategic Plan

The City of Adelaide's Strategic Plan 2024 – 28 sets out that our Objective is to 'Encourage bold, interesting and purposeful development'. It states that 'Our Places - Will be interesting, purposeful and safe' and 'Our Community – Will be vibrant, connected and diverse'.

City of Adelaide's Draft Housing Strategy

Housing policy touches on a wide range of planning, finance and governance structures. The City of Adelaide's draft Housing Strategy acknowledges councils need to consider land use, zoning, building codes, infrastructure development, public finance, taxation, fee structures and legal, administrative and regulatory frameworks supporting infrastructure crucial to housing.

In Australia roles are split between levels of government. We need to find ways to partner and influence to achieve the following:

1. More affordable housing choices for people renting in the city.
2. Identify key redevelopment sites that could leverage opportunities for affordable housing and adaptive reuse.
3. Drive innovation in housing product, environmental sustainability and delivery models to grow diverse affordable housing stock.
4. Attract institutional and not-for-profit investment into the City of Adelaide as a targeted economic opportunity for city worker housing.
5. Leverage the delivery of affordable housing through government land holdings.
6. Integrate across levels of government for a more coordinated approach.

City Plan

City of Adelaide is developing City Plan as a spatial tool to support population growth through targeted intervention and investment in housing and social infrastructure.

City of Adelaide Disability Access and Inclusion Plan

City of Adelaide is committed to demonstrating best practice in access and inclusion planning. In implementing the Disability Access and Inclusion Plan (DAIP), we recognise that it isn't impairment, but rather the barriers that exist in the community, that limit people's ability to fully participate and create a disabling environment. Council's DAIP advocates for the delivery of housing outcomes for people with disability.

City of Adelaide Reconciliation Action Plan

Our Stretch Reconciliation Action Plan (Stretch RAP) outlines a role for Council to advocate for better outcomes for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander experiences with other levels of Government. This includes working with Aboriginal Community controlled organisations, non-government and government organisations to identify opportunities to support the delivery of programs to community involving health, housing and social wellbeing.

Council is also focused on developing our existing working relationship opportunities with State Government to collectively develop and support strategies in addressing homelessness and the safety of remote visitors in the city.

Governance and Collective Impact

City of Adelaide works with a broad range of organisations in the homelessness sector and is open to new partnerships that achieve goals set out in this draft Strategy. Some of our key and enduring partnerships include:

SA Safety and Wellbeing Taskforce

Multi-agency government Taskforce lead by the Department for Human Services, with representation across the State Government, along with the City of Adelaide, City of Port Adelaide Enfield and the National Indigenous Australians Agency .

Department of Human Services

The Department of Human Services supports a range of reconnect services such as community connections program, financial wellbeing programs, child and family supports and Aboriginal services.

SA Homelessness Alliances

The Toward Home Alliance, established by the SA Housing Authority, has primary responsibility for homelessness services in the City of Adelaide and, among other activities, drives the Adelaide Zero Project in conjunction with other project partners.

Adelaide Zero Project

The Adelaide Zero Partnership supports the Advance to Zero methodology. Advance to Zero is an approach for ending homelessness being applied in communities nationally, assisting them to reach Functional Zero homelessness; a measure that recognises the dynamic nature of homelessness. 'A community reaches Functional Zero when the average capacity of its housing system is greater than the existing need'. The Adelaide Zero Project implements the Advance to Zero methodology by:

- Tracking levels of homelessness through regular updates on key metrics, operational data, outcomes, challenges, and opportunities of the project.
- Identifying existing, future, and potential partners in the Adelaide Zero Project, including the role and reporting requirements required by the South Australian Housing Authority.

- Using the data generated by the Adelaide Zero Project from the 'By-Name' list to understand the drivers of movement of people experiencing homelessness from the regions into the city.
- Advocacy for prevention of homelessness broadly and supporting the actions of the Toward Home Alliance and the State Government.

Communities of Practice

The City of Adelaide facilitates networking across homelessness sector service providers through organisation and participation in Communities of Practice to ensure whole of community responses to homelessness in the city.

Local Government Association of South Australia

The Local Government Association of South Australia facilitates the Local Government Homelessness Network for South Australia Councils to share information and knowledge, and advocate across the sector.

Flinders University Centre for Social Impact

The Centre for Social Impact (CSI) has a longstanding history of working with the South Australian Housing Authority (SAHA) and the housing and homelessness sector. This work includes redesigning the South Australian homelessness service sector as a reformed outcomes-focussed alliance system. CSI also has a long association since inception with the Adelaide Zero Project.
